Transitional Protection rollback

On 1 October 2023, as part of the Transitional Protection remedy, any affected members will see their pensionable service accrued between 1 April 2015 and 31 March 2022 rolled back to the final salary scheme. Their Benefit Statement will be updated to reflect this.

This means members are treated as entering the career average scheme for the first time on 1 April 2022.

You can find out more in our full story.

Transitional Protection and excess service

Due to changes introduced to the Teachers' Pension Scheme in relation to Transitional Protection, there may be members in your establishment who hold excess service, which can't be rolled back into the final salary scheme.

We've recently reached out to several employers to check if they've affected members and the next phase will be to directly contact those of you who have.

Teachers' Pensions Action Forum (TPAF)

We're hosting our next TPAF event on 15 and 16 November. This event is a fantastic opportunity for you to learn about subjects related to the Scheme that matter to you most.

We'll be circulating an email later in the month including more information on our different workshops.

Transitional Protection from 1 October

From 1 October 2023, we'll be asking active members who are affected by the Transitional Protection changes to choose between final salary and career average pension scheme benefits.

Members can make their choice at the time they take their pension benefits; this is referred to as the Deferred Choice Underpin (DCU).

Changes to our website - training

We've made our training section easier to find on our website!

You'll now see the training hub on the top navigation bar in the Employer Hub.

We want you to make the most of our fantastic opportunities, which is why we've brought about this change.

Retirement application revisions

We've recently received a high number of retirement application revisions due to service and salary updates made by some of you after we've received the retirement application.

It's important all correct information is presented at the time of the retirement application being submitted. We've created a factsheet to help you with this.
