

It's time to check in on your pension.

Even though you're not currently contributing to the Scheme you can still access your Benefit Statement at any time via My Pension Online \(MPO\). It gives you an illustration of what your benefits are currently worth and gets updated annually.

Taking a regular look at your teacher's pension is a great way to reflect on how your plans for retirement are shaping up and to consider paying contributions again.

If you're unsure about any of the information in your Statement or how to find it, check out our short video. If you think that any of the information in your Statement is inaccurate or there's missing service, we recommend that you contact the relevant employer.

Changes to how you log in

We recently changed the way you log in to My Pension Online.

You used to confirm your identity via a unique password and PIN number. With Multi Factor Authentication you'll be presented with three different options to confirm your identity - Authenticator App, SMS or Email. Depending on your preferred option, you'll be sent a passcode via that method.

Find out more about MFA online. We've also a short video to help you with the process.

Thanks to our Member Forum

Last year we launched our Member Forum, thank you to everyone who has taken the time to get involved and given us feedback. We'd like share a few of the things the Member Forum has helped to influence so far.

Transitional Protection Update

If you're affected by Transitional Protection you'll want to know what it means for you as soon as possible.

Currently, until stage two of the legislation process is completed there's no legal basis for the Scheme to implement the remedy. We therefore won't be able to provide options to new retirees, or those affected during the remedy period until October 2023 at the earliest. As we'll have to contact all members affected by the remedy from this date, please bear with us as it's likely to take some time to reach everyone.

You can find out more about stage two on our website. For now, if you're planning to retire, we encourage you to continue with your plans as normal.

Protect your loved ones

Your pension isn't just about you, it also provides for your family if the worst should happen.

When it comes to death benefits it's important to know the difference between a death grant and a long-term pension.

You can nominate any individual or number of individuals to receive a one-off death grant payment. The long-term pension is only paid to those shown to be financially dependent on you such as your partner and/or children.

Meet Dave

We've recently created a couple of new case studies to help you understand more about your pension.

Read Dave's story about how he's continuing to check in on his pension, even after leaving teaching, to ensure he gets the retirement he wants.
